

Agile 3

Before you start doing Agile...

...start with Sprint 0 (Planning).

1. Define who will be part of the team and which role each person will play.
2. Agree with the team on days and times for the Agile rituals.
3. Get your physical or digital tools ready (e.g. Kanban board).
4. Make sure you have done the due diligence required for the project (e.g. business case, budget, key requirements, etc.) – yes, you still need it, just keep it lean.
5. Determine any constraints that are part of your project (budget, time, business cycle, etc.).
6. Define which days you will release, test and sprint (e.g. releases or push to production will be done on a Thursday morning).

How do I start doing Agile?

At its core, Agile does the same thing you and I do when faced with too much to do and not enough time.

1. You make a list > feature or what needs to be done (a.k.a. user stories)
2. You size things up > estimate the effort required for each user story by assigning a unit of measure (a.k.a. story points)
3. You set some priorities > put most important story points at the top of the list (backlog), which will be the first you take for the upcoming sprint.
4. You start executing > working through user stories (delivering value) over a period of time (a.k.a. sprints)
5. You update the plan as you go > you reflect on what worked and what didn't and adjust (a.k.a. retrospectives)
